Welcome to our charity dinner

Dear guest,

We would like to welcome you to mark the 50th anniversary of Academic Urology in Nijmegen. We are honored to have you as our guest at the beautiful venue Stevenskerk. In recent months, we have done our utmost to make tonight's dinner an unforgettable event. The evening will be partially devoted to the Radboud Oncology Foundation by giving you the opportunity to contribute to cancer research. The proceeds of the evening are dedicated to research at the Radboud university Nijmegen medical center to 'personalized cure & care' for bladder cancer, kidney cancer and prostate cancer. Tonight several speakers will inform you about the importance of additional research into the treatment of these cancers.

Besides the special attention to this important charity, we also would treat you to a fully catered, musical evening. We have invited a selection of classical artists to give a performance. This evening will be framed with a delicious dinner with fine wines, while the staff of the Stevenskerk will do their utmost to contribute to a memorable evening. We wish you a festive dinner in good company.

Research

When in 1965 the Radboud university medical center and its quite young scientific environment decided to further develop urology to an academic level, it gave the roots for its independence and, consequently, the chance for it to grow to a full blown Department of Urology.

We are committed to funding cancer research of the highest international calibre. However, most of this research is dependent on grants, companies and on the money from individuals like you give us. Thanks to supporters we have improved the outcome of cancer patients by discovering new ways to prevent, diagnose and treat urological cancer. Over the past 50 years, our researchers at the Radboudumc have made consistent progress in the fight against cancer.

We can optimize the outcome of patients with urological cancers. With a better knowledge on adequate diagnosis of cancer and a better characterization of its aggressiveness we can personalize the best treatment for the right patients. Better and new tumormarkers can achieve this by improving the outcome of patients with urological cancers, but also preventing unnecessary treatments. In our urology research laboratory we have developed unique markers in prostate, bladder and kidney cancer. These achievements and the use of adequate decision aids need further intense research to be able making the next step in personalized cure and care.

Neap tide, silk screen in 1995, by Jan Wolkers

Framed (wood) behind passe-partout

Image and text

H 83 x W 63 cm

Wolkers paintings arise, as Wolkers said in 2007, from what he collects in solitude. Therefore he must live in peace. Sources of inspiration for his abstract works are the sea, the countryside and the tranquility. Much discussed are the election posters in his possession, painted in the second half of the sixties for the CPN. Sometimes Wolkers signed his paintings on the back, like Mondrian, because he felt that the signature detonates with the art.

Green Ewe Keta (kente) Cloth

This lot is comprised of three authentic, old, handwoven cloths from West Africa. Recently found in villages in Ghana, Togo and Ivory Coast, they represent the exquisite textile crafts of the Ewe people of Ghana and Togo, and the weavers of the Bondoukou region of Ivory Coast. Many collectors regard the Ewe textiles as the highest expression of African weaving artistry. The Bondoukou weavers have been respected for their fine woven goods since at least the mid-18th century and produce textiles that rival those of the Ewe and their neighbors the Ashante. These cloths are in remarkably fine condition for their age because they are treasured by families in remembrance of ancestors. They are carefully stored in wooden boxes or tin trunks and kept as a part of a family's heritage.

Also internationally the restaurant is renowned for its fine food and atmosphere. The US wine magazine Wine Spectator has been praising the restaurant with an "Award of Excellence" for 10 years, as well as the German Schlemmer Atlas, who rates Het Savarijn with three "Kochlöffel".

Moral Justice, screen 1991, by Rob Scholte

Screenprint in green and red, 1991, on wove paper, signed in pencil. Framed (wood) behind passe-partout.

H 83 x W 103 cm

Scholte is an image maker. He organizes and places images - from the media, from his own extensive archives - in a new context, in which he provides images of a new meaning. Often one finds in his inconsistencies and contradictions which are 'overcome' in their new context. The meticulously painted works of his hands are usually produced by assistants and signed by him. A 17th century method of working which he pursues. His method is illustrative of the postmodernism and emphasizes the continuous flow of images that surround, shapes and mold us. The media are his theme of which he gets inspiration, expressing criticism of their manipulation and he also acted as a 'media personality'.

Love Couple with eros, litho 1994, by Pieter Defesche

Framed (wood) behind passe-partout

H 103 x W 83 cm

Defesche crafted paintings, gouaches and prints. He mainly painted landscapes, still lifes and biblical scenes in expressionistic, almost in abstract style. He also made collages, murals, sets and costumes, including for the Scapino Ballet.

In the early 70s, he developed a style of painting that has not changed substantially since. However, within his imagery incessantly accent shifts took place. Especially with the landscape as a starting point, Defesche painted a mythical reality, in which he constantly navigated between figuration and abstraction.

Cadeau Man Ray, Luciano Anselmino

The 1974 edition of Cadeau, 1921, or 'Gift', is one of the famous icons of the surrealist movement. It consists of an everyday continental flat iron of the sort that had to be heated on a stove, transformed here into a non-functional, disturbing object by the addition of a single row of fourteen tacks. The transformation of an item of ordinary domestic life into a strange, unnamable object with sadistic connotations exemplified the power of the object within dada and surrealism to escape the rule of logic and the conventional identification of words and objects. Man Ray once said, 'There are objects that need names.'
